EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

- Unlike their counterparts elsewhere, clients in the Nordics are unlikely to mention one firm far more than any other. Instead, they're far more likely to mention five. There may not be a huge amount of difference between IBM, McKinsey, KPMG, Deloitte and Accenture, in terms of how much they're being talked about, but there's clear daylight between these five and everyone else.
- Clients in the Nordics are the least positive about the quality of consulting firms' work of any region we survey. But against that backdrop, Oliver Wyman, IBM, and Aon Hewitt are the firms that stand out as being those about which clients are most positive.
- Nordic clients aren't hugely impressed with the value added by consulting firms either. Not only are they less likely to speak positively about value than their counterparts anywhere else, they're more likely to be actively negative. But among all firms, EY, Oliver Wyman, and Bain & Company stand out as being the most respected for the value they deliver.
- One reason Nordic clients may hold harsher opinions than clients in other regions is a mismatch in outlook between client and consultant. Clients have a much more cautious outlook about their use of consulting, while consultants themselves are bullish. Clients may also be tougher to impress in the cutting-edge digital space because many are quite far advanced in their digital journeys; most consulting firms aren't nearly as advanced.
- Two factors seem to cause poor perceptions of value. First, financial services clients are particularly negative about the value of consulting. Second, there's a correlation between mindshare and perceptions of value: The more a firm is talked about, the less likely clients are to speak positively about value. We think the challenges of operating in a market in which clients want global experience but local familiarity, as well as the heightened importance of cultural fit in the region, explain this.
- Do clients value some consulting services more than others? We've uncovered some correlations between the use of technology and risk services and perceptions of value.

METHODOLOGY

Who did we talk to?

We have 741 responses from our survey of executives, directors, and senior managers in the Nordics in November and December 2016, all of whom have been responsible for buying substantial volumes of consulting services in the previous year. They represent a wide range of industries and business functions, and 82% work in organisations that generate more than $500m in revenue.

This report also includes qualitative research from interviews carried out in 2016 and 2017 with senior buyers of consulting in the Nordics to bring aspects of our findings to life.

What did we ask them?

Each respondent was asked to tell us about three consulting firms and was presented with a list of 18 leading consulting firms in the Nordics. We focus respondents on the world's leading consulting firms to ensure we have sufficient responses to carry out a detailed analysis.

We asked each respondent to share their views on each of the three firms selected, focusing on the following areas:

- Quality: Their perception of the quality of service provided by each firm in ten different consulting services.
- Value: Their view of how much value each firm added in relation to the fees paid for their services.
- Recommendations: Whether they have recommended any of these firms for any consulting service.
- Attributes: How they rate each firm and the individuals from it across a range of attributes.

How we rank firms in this report

In this report, we reveal the top-ranked firms in four areas: mindshare, quality, value, and most recommended firm. We look at the top-ranked firms overall, but where we can, we also split the data to look at perceptions in each consulting service, by client type, by industry, and by function (that is, looking at how views of respondents in different industries and different business functions vary). In breaking down the data to this level our sample sizes can become quite small, so where it isn't big enough for us to be confident making a ranking, we've declined to do so. That means that in this report we are unable to provide a ranking by function or by industry. If you have questions about the industries we've omitted from this report, try visiting our online portal (see page 9), where you'll be able to see all the data we have in one place. If you have further questions, please contact info@sourceglobalresearch.com.

Mindshare: We base our rankings on the numbers of respondents talking about each firm, relative to each other. To calculate that, we awarded a score of 100 to the most-mentioned firm, and work out how many times each other firm was mentioned in relation to it.

Quality: We base our rating on the sum of the proportion of people who describe quality as either "high" or "very high". Where that produces an equal result between two firms, we take into account the share who have described quality as "very high" to determine the order in which they are ranked.

Value: We base our rating on the sum of the proportion of people who say that the value a firm delivers is greater (to any extent) than the fees it charges. Where that produces an equal result between two firms, we take into account the extent to which value is seen to be greater than fees (respondents had the choice of saying it was twice, five times, or ten times greater than fees) to determine the order in which they are ranked.

Most recommended: We base our ranking on the proportion of people who say they have recommended a firm. Where that produces an equal result between two or more firms, those firms simply tie.

Advertising these findings:

Firms like to use these findings in their own marketing and KPIs. Source's marketing licence allows you to publicise your ranking in advertising, editorials, presentations to external clients, below your email signature, and on your corporate website. The licence also allows you to use the Source "badge" within these. The badge is given to those firms that have been rated number one, two, or three by clients in a given sector/region for mindshare, quality and value.

Both the licence and the badge are valid for 24 months, and for more information, please contact Ella-Sian Jolley, or click here.

HOW TO USE THIS CLIENT PERCEPTION STUDY

It's very important to be clear about what our Client Perception Studies are, and are not:

What they're not are exhaustive studies of clients' opinions about specific firms that remain statistically robust when filtered to provide detailed data about views at a very granular level of the market. So if, for instance, you want statistically robust data about what clients in the pharma sector in Germany think about McKinsey's operational improvement capabilities, you won't find it in these reports. We do profile individual firms in our reports to the extent we can—indeed this remains one of the most popular parts of the reports with readers—and we do, separately, provide Brand Perceptions Summaries of the world's leading consulting firms, but our Client Perception Studies are not designed to replace the sort of in-depth client research that many firms carry out (and often ask us to carry out for them).

What they are designed to do is provide a snapshot of views within a particular consulting market at a point in time. What they lack in detail about individual firms they make up for in three important ways:

- A multi-firm view. Our reports enable consulting firms to see how they stack up against their competitors in the minds of clients.
- A view from prospects, not just existing clients. We include the views of people who aren't currently active clients of the firm they're telling us about, enabling us to understand what we tend to think of as a firm's brand pipeline and to compare the views of prospective and active clients. In doing this last, we're able to assess the extent to which clients' expectations of a firm are met in reality and how well a firm's marketing and delivery capabilities are aligned.
- Independence and expertise. The trouble with conducting your own client research is that clients are often reluctant to express negative views about firms (and people) with whom they've worked closely. They have no such concerns when they're telling us. Added to which, we're able to bring to bear the expertise we've gained over years of analysing the consulting market, helping to interpret the results within the context of the wider market and the strategic priorities of consulting firms.

It's important to remember that this is a study of client perceptions; a summarised view of what we're hearing from the market. It's not Source's view, nor is it a comment on market share or a recommendation to clients about which firms to buy from. The audience of these reports is very much the firms featured in them, and those interested in the strength of the competition in any given market.

The difference between direct and indirect clients

We talk about two types of clients in this report: direct and indirect.

Direct clients are clients who either have very recent experience of working with the firm they chose to tell us about or are working with it now.

Indirect clients are clients who feel qualified to share an opinion about a firm but aren't among their direct clients. They may have had exposure to the work the firm has done elsewhere in their organisation or have simply formed an impression based on reading a firm's thought leadership or being exposed to its marketing in some other form. In simple terms, indirect clients are prospects.

The differences between the opinions of these two types of clients tell us a lot about the differences between expectation (indirect clients) and reality (direct clients). But it also tells us something about the differences between a firm's marketing and what it actually delivers.

What can I do with the data?

From here, you will be able to filter all the data in this report on each of the key areas: mindshare, quality, value, recommendations, attributes and importance of attributes.

Figure 6

When you log on, you'll notice that in some areas there's data that's in a faded grey colour. This is where we have data, but it's not a big enough sample to include in a ranking in this report. Nonetheless, we share it online in case you do want to see what, for example, indirect operations clients in the public sector (or a similarly complex split) think of a particular firm. If you have any questions about any of the data, please contact info@sourceglobalresearch.com.
