EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

- Three consulting firms, IBM Global Business Services, Accenture, and Deloitte, dominate the minds of procurement professionals. All other consulting firms are far less likely to be mentioned than these three.
- Only one of those firms, IBM, is seen to back up its impressive mindshare score by featuring prominently from the perspective of quality. In fact by this measure it's the top-ranked firm, drawing especially high praise, relative to other firms, for its work in strategy, operational improvement, and data & analytics. IBM is also one of the most respected firms for the extent to which it delivers value in excess of the fees it charges. But it's pipped to the top spot by this measure by Roland Berger, a firm that's especially well-regarded among indirect clients (prospects) for the value they expect it to deliver.
- Our report finds evidence of a widespread acceptance, among procurement professionals, of convergence among consulting firms, speaking positively about firms in relation to services with which they weren't historically associated.
- A significant link is revealed between views about the quality of a firm's work, and views about its prices. Where one is good, the other is good. We conclude that, counter to the stereotypical view of procurement professionals, quality is actually the driving force here.
- There's evidence of deteriorating opinions about the Big Four among procurement professionals, and of particularly negative views about price. But we conclude that discounting may have become too prevalent and that attention may more usefully be focused on quality.

METHODOLOGY

Who did we talk to?

We have 73 responses from our surveys of procurement professionals in December 2016, and 114 from a supplementary survey in May 2017, all of whom have been responsible for buying substantial volumes of consulting services in the previous year.

What did we ask them?

Each respondent was asked to tell us about three consulting firms and was presented with a list of twenty leading consulting firms. We focus respondents on the world's leading consulting firms to ensure we have sufficient responses to carry out a detailed analysis.

We asked each respondent to share their views on each of the three firms selected, focusing on the following areas:

- Quality: Their perception of the quality of service provided by each firm in ten different consulting services.
- Value: Their view of how much value each firm added in relation to the fees paid for its services.
- Recommendations: Whether they have recommended, or would recommend, any of these firms to a colleague or peer.
- Attributes: How they rate each firm and the individuals from it across a range of attributes, and what they think the most important attributes of each firm are.

How we rank firms in this report

In this report, we reveal the top-ranked firms in four areas: mindshare, quality, value, and most recommended firm. We look at the top-ranked firms overall, but where we can, we also split the data to look at perceptions in each consulting service, by client type, by industry, and by function (that is, looking at how views of respondents in different industries and different business functions vary). In breaking down the data to this level our sample sizes can become quite small, so where it isn't big enough for us to be confident making a ranking, we've declined to do so. If you have further questions, please contact info@sourceglobalresearch.com.

Mindshare: We base our rankings on the numbers of respondents talking about each firm, relative to each other. To calculate that, we awarded a score of 100 to the most-mentioned firm, and work out how many times each other firm was mentioned in relation to it.

Quality: We base our rating on the sum of the proportion of people who describe quality as either "high" or "very high". Where that produces an equal result between two firms, we take into account the share who have described quality as "very high" to determine the order in which they are ranked.

Value: We base our rating on the sum of the proportion of people who say that the value a firm delivers is greater (to any extent) than the fees it charges. Where that produces an equal result between two firms, we take into account the extent to which value is seen to be greater than fees (respondents had the choice of saying it was twice, five times, or ten times greater than fees) to determine the order in which they are ranked.

Most recommended: We base our ranking on the proportion of people who say they have recommended a firm. Where that produces an equal result between two or more firms, those firms simply tie.

Advertising these findings:

Firms like to use these findings in their own marketing and KPIs. Source's marketing licence allows you to publicise your ranking in advertising, editorials, presentations to external clients, below your email signature, and on your corporate website. The licence also allows you to use the Source "badge" within these. The badge is given to those firms that have been rated number one, two, or three by clients in a given sector/region for mindshare, quality, and value.

Both the licence and the badge are valid for 24 months, and for more information, please contact Ella-Sian Jolley, or click here.

HOW TO USE THIS CLIENT PERCEPTION STUDY

It's very important to be clear about what our Client Perception Studies are, and are not:

What they're not are exhaustive studies of clients' opinions about specific firms that remain statistically robust when filtered to provide detailed data about views at a very granular level of the market. So if, for instance, you want statistically robust data about what clients in the pharma sector in Germany think about McKinsey's operational improvement capabilities, you won't find it in these reports. We do profile individual firms in our reports to the extent we can—indeed this remains one of the most popular parts of the reports with readers—and we do, separately, provide Brand Perceptions Summaries of the world's leading consulting firms, but our Client Perception Studies are not designed to replace the sort of in-depth client research that many firms carry out (and often ask us to carry out for them).

What they are designed to do is provide a snapshot of views within a particular consulting market at a point in time. What they lack in detail about individual firms they make up for in three important ways:

- A multi-firm view. Our reports enable consulting firms to see how they stack up against their competitors in the minds of clients.
- A view from prospects, not just existing clients. We include the views of people who aren't current active clients of the firm they're telling us about, enabling us to understand what we tend to think of as a firm's brand pipeline, and to compare the views of prospective and active clients. In doing this last, we're able to assess the extent to which clients' expectation of a firm are met in reality, and how well a firm's marketing and delivery capabilities are aligned.
- Independence and expertise. The trouble with conducting your own client research is that clients are often reluctant to express negative views about firms (and people) with whom they've worked closely. They have no such concerns when they're telling us. Added to which, we're able to bring the expertise we've gained over years of analysing the consulting market to bear, helping to interpret the results within the context of the wider market and the strategic priorities of consulting firms.

It's important to remember that this is a study of client perceptions; a summarised view of what we're hearing from the market. It's not Source's view, nor is it a comment on market share or a recommendation to clients about which firms to buy from. The audience of these reports is very much the firms featured in them, and those interested in the strength of the competition in any given market.

The difference between direct and indirect clients

We talk about two types of clients in this report: direct and indirect.

Direct clients are clients who either have very recent experience of working with the firm they chose to tell us about or are working with it now.

Indirect clients are clients who feel qualified to share an opinion about a firm but aren't among their direct clients. They may have had exposure to the work the firm has done elsewhere in their organisation or have simply formed an impression based on reading a firm's thought leadership or being exposed to its marketing in some other form. In simple terms, indirect clients are prospects.

The differences between the opinions of these two types of clients tell us a lot about the differences between expectation (indirect clients) and reality (direct clients). But it also tells us something about the differences between a firm's marketing and what it actually delivers.

SOURCE REPORT PROGRAMMES

CONSULTING MARKET PROGRAMME

- A series of detailed reports that contain the most accurate view available about the consulting market in an extensive list of countries and regions. These explore key themes, provide market sizing data, growth forecasts, and deep analysis, all backed up by extensive quantitative and qualitative research amongst consulting firms and clients.
- As well as our country reports, we also produce a global view of four different industries. These reports contain industry analysis, market sizing data, and growth forecasts at a global level, as well as breakdowns by sub-sector, service, and geography.

STRATEGIC PLANNING PROGRAMME

 A series of reports that take a detailed look at the big trends in the global consulting industry, interpreting them in terms of what they mean for consulting firms and who is best placed to exploit them.

CLIENT PERCEPTION PROGRAMME

- A series of reports based on our huge client survey, that reveal what clients think about the leading consulting firms in a number of regions and industries. We rank the leading consulting firms in terms of clients' perceptions of things like quality and value.
- As part of this programme, we also publish brand perception summaries. These give an in-depth and unique view of the world's leading consulting firms. Available on request.

WHITE SPACE

 A series of reports that analyse the quality and effectiveness of thought leadership. These are included in all White Space subscriptions.

How to subscribe

You can either subscribe to a whole programme (the cheapest way of getting access to everything) or buy reports individually. All reports in our programmes come with a global licence, so once you've bought them you can use them anywhere in your firm.

What's included

- A global licence.
- An executive summary (8-10 pages) highlighting key themes.
- Relevant content, updated regularly: blogs, podcasts, and spotlights.
